You can choose between a full container load (FCL), where you have an entire container to yourself, or a less-than-container load (LCL), where you share container space with others, paying only for the volume you use.

Properly preparing and packing your freight is crucial for a successful shipment, regardless of the method you choose. Ensure all items are securely packed in sturdy boxes or crates. Label everything clearly with your name, contact information, and destination address.

Creating a detailed inventory list is also a smart step. This not only helps you keep track of your belongings but is often required for insurance and customs purposes. Proper packing minimizes the risk of damage during transit.
